Safety Information

About Photosensitive Seizures

A very small percentage of people may experience a seizure when exposed to certain visual images, including flashing lights or patterns that may appear in video games. Even people who have no history of seizures or epilepsy may have an undiagnosed condition that can cause these "photosensitive epileptic seizures" while watching video games.

These seizures may have a variety of symptoms including: lightheadedness, altered vision, eye or face twitching, jerking or shaking of arms or legs, disorientation, confusion, or momentary loss of awareness. Seizures may also cause loss of consciousness or convulsions that can lead to injury from falling down or striking nearby objects.

Immediately stop playing and consult a doctor if you experience any of these symptoms. Parents should watch for or ask their children about the above symptoms - children and teenagers are more likely than adults to experience these seizures.

The risk of photosensitive epileptic seizures may be reduced by sitting farther from the television screen, using a smaller television screen, playing in a well-lit room, and not playing when you are drowsy or fatigued.

If you or any of your relatives have a history of seizures or epilepsy, consult a doctor before playing.

Other Important Health and Safety Information The Xbox Instruction Manual contains important safety and health information that you should read and understand before using this software.

Avoid Damage to Your Television

Do not use with certain televisions. Some televisions, especially front- or rear-projection types, can be damaged if any video games, including Xbox games, are played on them. Static images presented during the normal course of game play may "burn in" to the screen, causing a permanent shadow of the static image to appear at all times, even when video games are not being played. Similar damage may occur from static images created when placing a video game on hold or pause. Consult your television owner's manual to determine if video games can be safely played safely on your set. If you are unable to find this information in the owner's manual, contact your television dealer or the manufacturer to determine if video games can be played safely on your set.

Unauthorized copying, reverse engineering, transmission, public performance, rental, pay per play, or circumvention of copy protection is strictly prohibited.

Carnate Island

STATE OF MARYLAND DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS
CONFIDENTIAL INTERNAL MEMO: NOT FOR PUBLIC RELEASE
FACILITY LOCATION STATUS REPORT: CARNATE ISLAND

Carnate Island is certainly among the most bizarre and unique of the properties owned and maintained by the Department of Corrections, and the decision to locate Abbott State Penitentiary there was dubious at best.

The D.O.C. has received innumerable complaints from facility staff, who resent living in such a remote location with such a storied history, not to mention unseasonably poor weather. Penitentiaries are not meant to be pleasant, of course, but Carnate takes this principle to a new level.

The island is located ten miles off the coast of Maryland. A Puritan village was the first recorded group of Caucasian settlers in the late 17th century. After only a few decades a horrifying event transpired that involved the tragic deaths of a number of townspeople. This resulted in the disbanding of the community.

A lighthouse was built on the island in 1834, and is still in operation to this day. It is now automated, though it is plagued by frequent breakdowns.

In the late 19th century, a wealthy family purchased the entire island and built a sizable estate on its west side. The family's stay was short lived. Apparently they were deeply traumatized by an undisclosed incident and immediately moved away.

The mansion was subsequently converted into a mental institution, though whether it was officially accredited remains uncertain. The Carnate Institution for the Alienated, as it was called, was run by one Dr. Killjoy until some time in the 1920s.

Files indicate that Killjoy's methods were unscientific at best, barbaric and depraved at worst. The asylum still stands today, and anyone who has paid it a visit will have a ghost story to tell you.

The federal government acquired the island in the 1930s for use by the US Army during World War II. Following the war, ownership was transferred to the State of Maryland, and the facilities were converted into Abbott State Penitentiary. Operation of the facility continues to this day.

The D.O.C. also provides barracks for corrections officers and their families, necessary since there is no regular ferry service to the mainland. Employee retention rate at Abbott is low; unsurprising, given the bizarre living arrangements that are required of employees, not to mention the generally unsettling and unpleasant nature of the island itself.

FACILITY STATUS REPORT: ABBOTT STATE PENITENTIARY

STATE MARYLAND DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS CONFIDENTIAL INTERNAL MEMO: NOT FOR PUBLIC RELEASE

Unfortunately for the Maryland Department of Corrections, Abbott State Penitentiary is a facility whose reputation is hopelessly tarnished. The facility has been consistently represented negatively in the media, but the facts do not paint a pretty picture.

Among Abbott's failings: one of the highest homicide rates of any penitentiary in the country; an extremely volatile population, with six full-scale riots in the last twenty years; an extremely low retention rate among wardens (there have been eight in the last fifteen years), not to mention continually disgruntled corrections officers (officers have been known to quit rather than accept a transfer to Abbott); an aging facility that has not been properly maintained, with the sea air having corroded and worn the facility; and finally the ominous history of Carnate Island itself.

As difficult as it may be for us within the D.O.C. to admit, few who have visited it would deny that Abbott's reputation is deserved.

Originally, Abbott's central structures were used by the United States Army as a prisoner of war camp during World War II. Maryland acquired the property shortly after the war, and the D.O.C. established Abbott there in 1948.

A rock quarry was used to provide the raw materials for construction, while the inmates provided the labor. Maryland transfers only its highest risk and most violent inmates here, and the corrections officer's struggle just to keep themselves safe.

It is this writer's opinion that the officers have given up on trying to maintain a facility that is safe for inmates. One can hardly blame them.

The state carries out its death sentences at Abbott. Fortunately, due to geographical reality, death penalty protesters have a difficult time making it to the penitentiary, which the D.O.C. views as a plus. A few protesters have tried, with some unfortunate results.

Over the years, Abbott has employed a number of execution methods: the electric chair, the gas chamber and lethal injection, which is the only one still in use today. Further contributing to Abbott's dark reputation is the story of Captain Hermes Haight, a Corrections Officer who served as executioner for some 27 years.

In a truly surreal incident, Haight ended up taking his own life in the gas chamber. Unfortunately, this is the type of behavior that Carnate Island seems to bring out in people.

ABBOTT STATE PENITENTIARY INMATE REPORT

STATE OF MARYLAND DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS
CONFIDENTIAL DOCUMENT: NOT FOR PUBLIC RELEASE

COMPLETED BY: Supervising Corrections Officer Ethan Edwards

INMATE IDENTIFICATION NUMBER: 16229A

HEIGHT: 5'10"

WEIGHT: 180 lbs

HAIR: Dark brown/Black

EYES: Brown

MARKS/SCARS/TATTOOS: Large tattoo across his back.

NEXT OF KIN: None.

OFFENSE: 3 counts of first degree murder. Convicted, 8/2.

SENTENCE: Death by lethal injection.

RELEASE DATE: Scheduled date of execution is Dec. 15

CURRENT LEGAL STATUS: No appeals pending.

ASSIGNED HOUSING UNIT: D-Block, unit #DX-02.

MEDICAL STATUS: Inmate claims to be prone to black outs, during which time he has no memory of his actions. No medical data has ever been presented to back up this claim. Inmate has anger management issues.

NOTES: Corrections officers will need to be mindful of inmate's safety due to the nature of his crime. D.O.C. regulations prohibit discussion of the specifics of an inmate's crime between officers, but due to the high level of publicity surrounding this inmate's offense I will make an exception: inmate was convicted of killing his ex-wife and two young children. Penitentiary population does not look well on child killers. That said, inmate has a record of violent (and sometimes lethal) altercations during previous sentence carried out at Eastern Correctional Institution. In short: it seems he is able to take care of himself. Despite periodic outbursts of violence (primarily against other inmates), inmate has been very cooperative with corrections personnel. This inmate will need to be watched closely, though the amount of trouble he could cause on death row is certainly minimal.

The HUD

1. HEALTH

2. INSANITY

During the game, your weapons may not be enough to defeat the creatures you encounter. At this time, take a look at your Insanity Meter. As you kill creatures, the meter fills and eventually pulsates. Once it pulsates, you can press the Y button (Insanity) to transform yourself into a raging beast. Once transformed, your Insanity Meter will diminish. Once it's empty, you'll start to lose health, so you'll need to press the Y button again to transform back before all of your health is gone.

These tick marks show how many of the current type of thrown weapon Torque possesses. He can hold up to 8 of each type of thrown weapon. Each time one is thrown, a tick will disappear.

4. ROUNDS

FOURTH ROW: Select Flashlight or Flare - Turn your flashlight or On or Off or select your flares as a thrown item. Turning the light off in lit areas is important to save batteries.

Note: Review pages 16-19 for details regarding the items displayed on your Inventory Menu.

CORRECTIONS OFFICER EQUIPMENT DOCUMENT

The Maryland Department of Corrections welcomes you to Abbott State Penitentiary. In your new position as a Corrections Officer you will need to use a variety of tools to do your part to keep Abbott secure. Due to budget cuts, Abbott is regrettably not always able to equip its COs with the most modern of equipment. Nevertheless, you will find the listed gear more than sufficient to take care of most situations that arise.

GENERAL EQUIPMENT

Flashlight

The clip-on flashlight is standard issue to all Abbott COs. Be sure to monitor your battery usage and keep spare batteries on hand. There have been many staff complaints that it does not look "cool" to clip the flashlight to your shirt, but the attachable nature of the light allows you to illuminate an area while keeping your hands free for handling weaponry.

Xombium

Studies have shown that working in a maximum security penitentiary is one of the most stressful and emotionally challenging jobs in America. For this reason, the DOC (Department of Corrections) issues Xombium to keep COs at their best. If you're ever feeling overwhelmed or just a bit down, don't hesitate to pop a few of these.

Maps

For the newjack CO, maps are essential for finding your way around Abbott.

To learn how to read the map, see MAP NAVIGATION, pg. 9.

Paperwork

Paperwork is a large part of your job as a CO. Do it right the first time or the warden will make sure you do it again.

Flares

Ideal for night use, these flares will keep an area illuminated for 15-30 seconds.

Flash/Bang Grenades

Flash/bang grenades do little to no lasting damage, but do temporarily blind and deafen everyone within a thirty foot radius. These are an essential part of crowd control during riot situations.

FIREARMS

Reminder: For obvious safety reasons, no firearms of any kind are allowed in inmate-accessible areas of the penitentiary.

Revolver

Though seldom used inside the penitentiary walls, all Abbott COs are issued .357 revolvers for use in emergency situations.

Note on use of revolvers: the recent popularity of Hong Kong action films has led to the common misconception that firing two pistols at once is "cool." In reality, doing so is not really practical unless you are at least, using two revolvers at once will result in a significant loss of accuracy.

Note the type of ammo you'll use.

Thompson Sub-machine Gun ("Tommy Gun")

This weapon is most commonly used by COs positioned in guard towers. Its spread and continuous rate of fire is quite effective at stopping escaping inmates. Note the two types of ammo.

Pump Action Shotgun

This weapon is primarily used for crowd control in riot situations. Officially, COs are advised to use rubber buckshot to prevent the inadvertent loss of life from use of the shotgun. However, it is tacitly understood that most officers keep their shotguns loaded with something considerably more deadly. Note the type of ammo you'll use.

Inmate Made Weapons

You'll find that inmates are dangerously resourceful when it comes to making weapons. The "shiv" or "shank" is slang for any inmate-made bladed weapon. Inmates who are interested in doing considerably more damage have been known to make "Molotov cocktails" out of glass bottles filled with flammable fluids. Extremely anti-social inmates have been known to construct far more deadly weapons, so be prepared for the worst.

Shiv

Molotov Cocktail

Relics

Carnate Island has a long and troubled past, and from time to time inmates have managed to dig up some old relics and use them to wreak havoc. If you stumble upon any of these dangerous items, be sure to notify your superior immediately so they can be properly disposed of.

TNT

Abbott was built out of rock from the Carnate Quarry, where TNT was used extensively.

Shrapnel Grenades

These "pineapple" style grenades date back to WWII when Fort Maleson was based on the island. These grenades are old and extremely dangerous, so if found, do not attempt to pick them up.

Browning M2

Another relic of Fort Maleson is the extremely powerful Browning M2 tripod-mounted machine gun. Particularly reckless COs have been known to use these for target practice. As a direct result, these officers are no longer employed by the LOC (Department of Corrections).

Hints & Tips

- Be sure to use Insanity Mode often. Each creature you kill will raise your Insanity EXP meter. Filling up the EXP meter will upgrade Torque's Smash attack.
- Reload your weapon after battle. You never know what's waiting around the next corner.
- When fighting Slayers, incapacitate their sight by shooting their heads off. This makes it bit more difficult for them to find you.
- When fighting, keep moving! Moving targets are harder to hit. Try to anticipate what your enemy will do next, then avoid it!
- Explore each area carefully. You don't want to overlook an important clue or item.
- Be attentive of the strength of your flashlight batteries. If you're in a well lit area, conserve batter power by turning the flashlight until you enter another dark area.
- The more creatures you kill while in Rage mode, the more powerful you'll become. When you gain enough "experience", use the "Jump" attack to access your new ability.
